Description:

This three bay, two story vinyl covered frame house is similar to its neighbors to the west. It has a central entrance and a semi-hexagonal projecting bay at the west side of the front elevation. Windows have two over two pane sash. A porch across the front is supported by round columns. The entrance retains a four-panel door.

This is an example of the later infill which occurred in Funkstown, off the main street in the early 20th century.
